Acknowledgments

If anyone deserves a Festschrift, it is Peter Lacovara. In addition to his innumerable contributions to the fields of Egyptian archaeology and Nubian studies, and his voluminous publications in so many areas, Peter is well known to all of us for his wonderful sense of humor, unparalleled baking skills (including the reproduction of ancient monuments), and thoughtful gifts. Despite never having held a permanent teaching position, he has taught in a variety of institutions all over the world, inspiring several generations of students. He has also mentored a stable of colleagues in museums and excavations, and has been unfailingly generous with sharing data and ideas with anyone who might ask.

Arch titles now seem almost de rigueur for Festschriften; in this case the title is one of Peter's most frequent utterances, and has been adopted by many of us—sometimes during the extended gestation of the present work—as we continue in our efforts to follow Peter's example.

We are most grateful to Billie Jean Collins of Lockwood Press for her gracious acceptance of our renegade citation system, generosity in terms of production, and endless patience throughout the process, and also to Christina Geisen, series editor, for going above and beyond the call of duty with grace and humor—they may well feel that Lockwood's Good Deed is not going unpunished.

We thank Janet Richards, aided and abetted by Joana Pinto, for compiling Peter's extensive bibliography, The Petty Foundation for logistical support, and a horde of funders and supporters of the project that are too numerous to mention outside the tabula gratulatoria.
